Lest We Forget.

These are words that my generation has seen and heard since we were young children.

Born in the post-World War II era, we have never known war. Instead, we have watched as the men who had fought in the Great War grew old and disappeared. We now watch as our parents' generation who battled against fascism goes through the same inevitable process.

Every November we are once again reminded not to forget. But with the passing of those who could tell us of the pain, the terror and yes the adventure of wartime, how do we honestly remember.

Many of our historians prefer to deal with the "big pictures" and the "big men". As undeniably important as these presentations of the past are, how can we remember the efforts of the young farm boy who marched off to the fields of Flanders, never to be seen again or the clerk who lived through the cold, wet evenings of bombardments in muddy trenches, only to catch some infection and die as a result.

Their deaths may not have been glorious and deserving of high medals, but their valour for just being there, is something my generation cannot appreciate, cannot properly value.

For this reason, it is very important that the few facts surrounding ordinary soldiers who fought and perhaps died during these horrible episodes of world history, be made available for us all to think about. The stories of these Canadian heroes are the stories of our great uncles or great aunts.

They, and the times they lived in, must not be allowed to become faceless, featureless names.

Remember all those currently in the service of the Canadian military and all her allies. While military conflicts are never easy to accept, neither is the denial of basic human rights. Whatever your opinions or beliefs, respect and honour those who are answering the call to serve their country.

On November 11th, please take a few moments from your busy day to pause, reflect, and thank those who have served and are serving our country.

Bruce Sharpe
